Building bright futures

TWENTY Greenwich residents have laid the foundations for careers in construction after successfully completing the first stage of a royal borough training scheme.

Run by Greenwich Local Labour and

Business (GLLaB) - the council's local labour initiative set up to help local people access training and jobs - the eight-week training scheme started at the beginning of the year.

The programme is run in conjunction with six developers in the borough

- Berkeley Homes, Lovell, Cardy, Ardmore, Durkan and Bouygues.

After pre-screening and initial assessments, the 20 successful candidates made it through the course which involved completing a

ONE HUNDRED and four businesses in Greenwich have achieved accreditation as Living Wage employers and have committed to paying their workers no less than £9.15 an hour.

The local firms have all signed up to be Living Wage employers as part of a royal borough campaign urging local businesses to pay their staff a decent living wage.

In March last year, Royal Greenwich had three local firms who had signed up to be London Living Wage employers at the start of the drive led by the council.

As an incentive, the council set up a business rate relief scheme to offset the costs of registering with the Living Wage Foundation - the organisation responsible for accrediting Living Wage employers. The discount covers five years' worth of London Living Wage subscriptions.

The royal borough was accredited as a Living Wage employer in 2013 and launched its own Greenwich Living Wage Campaign early last year.

The borough is home to just 2 per cent of London-based businesses but around a quarter of the new LLW accreditations for the capital come from Greenwich.

Last November, the borough's campaign was recognised by the Living Wage Foundation and CitizensUK which campaigns for employers to pay the Living Wage. The council was also asked to produce a good practice guide that other boroughs can learn from.

Councillor Sizwe James, the borough's cabinet member for transport, economy and smart cities, said: "Tackling the issue of low pay is a key element of our anti poverty strategy - and promoting a Living

Researchers appeal for vehicle testers

BACKSEAT drivers are needed to help steer research into automated cars.

And people who live, work, study or travel in the royal borough are invited to give their feedback on how driverless cars would operate in the borough as part of an £8m transport project.

Last week the Queen announced government plans for investment and insurance for driverless vehicles during her speech for the opening of Parliament.

In Greenwich, research into driverless vehicles is happening as part of the GATEway (Greenwich Automated driverless vehicles might impact life in and around Greenwich. Contributors are able to revisit the site as many times as they like, adding comments as they wish throughout the project.

Contributors can also sign up for a chance to participate in workshops, interviews and vehicle trials in Greenwich later this year. The trials will see fully automated electric vehicles navigating their way around Greenwich and selected participants will be able to ride in a driverless vehicle and give feedback on the experience.

"The aim of the site is to give those familiar with the Greenwich area a royal borough's smart city strategy which sets out the council's plans for using the latest technologies to meet the needs of its rapidly growing population. The strategy, launched last year, also aims to improve services and create a stronger economy.

INSIDE AND OUT: Cllr Sizwe James and council leader Denise Hyland take a seat in a driverless car and left, admire the vehicle livery

Cllr Sizwe James, the royal borough's cabinet member for transport, economy and smart cities, added: "This is a unique opportunity for local residents to provide input in to what could be one of the most significant transformations in our transport system. The council has consistently demonstrated its commitment to being at the leading edge of smart city innovation and the public trials are another example of how we're turning this promise into action."

The GATEway project is an £8 million project jointly funded by Innovate UK and industry and led by the TRL to investigate public perception, reaction and engagement to different types of automated vehicles.

ROYAL BOROUGH OF
GREENWICH

MUSIC students were all of a quaver for a performance with the London Symphony Orchestra last week.

But the pupils of Moatbridge School hit the highnote and soon won over their audience. The youngsters were accompanied by players from the London Symphony Orchestra (LSO) to celebrate their Carnival Day on May 13.

It was a special day of events, which saw the culmination of the LSO 'Discovery On track' programme in which members of the orchestra visited the school and joined the students in their music lessons.

The LSO On track programme is the result of a partnership between the London Symphony Orchestra and ten East London Music Services, in collaboration with the Barbican and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. It aims to offer musical experiences to people of all ages and backgrounds who have not necessarily had much previous contact with classical music and musicians.

Throughout the programme the students, aged 11 to 16, were introduced to musical instruments and various musical styles from classical to English folk and bebop. They also had a chance to perform songs they had composed with the professional musicians. The final performance also involved a visual element with images projected onto a screen behind the students.

The carnival theme was extended across the curriculum to inspire all pupils exploring the themes of diversity and multiculturalism.

Hana Vencovska is a music teacher at the small secondary school in Eltham for boys with social, emotional and behavioural special needs. She said: "The day celebrated the wide range of talents and gifts our pupils possess, and was a chance to exhibit the hard work of all pupils and staff alike. It was also our first opportunity to bring together the wider community of parents, staff, school governors and all friends of Moatbridge School."

Bus poster appeal for foster carers

A POSTER campaign appealing for foster carers is being launched for the second week of Fostering Fortnight (May 16-29). The theme for this year is 'Time to Foster, Time to Care' and the poster is promoting awareness of fostering as part of a 'back of bus campaign' running from Plumstead Bus Garage for four weeks starting on May 30. It's designed to highlight the need for potential carers and encourage them to come forward. Greenwich's Fostering Service is seeking more foster carers, particularly to look after teenagers, disabled children, unaccompanied asylum seekers, groups of brothers and sisters and for parents with babies. A wider pool of foster carers is needed so children can live with a family in their local area wherever possible. It's important that children live with families that are a good "match" for them, in terms of location, culture, lifestyle, language and interests.

● If you are interested in fostering for Royal Greenwich contact the Fostering Service on 0800 052 1499, email Fostering.Duty@royalgreenwich.gov.uk, www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/fostering or visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/fostering

Wage is key to the council's priorities of economic growth and job creation.

"It's fantastic that 104 local businesses have joined our campaign and have committed to paying their staff a decent living wage while enjoying the benefits of a discount on their business rates. It also means we have exceeded our first campaign target of getting 100 businesses signed up and I urge other employers to think about following suit as making a commitment to be a LLW employer makes a real difference to business, local families and the wider community."

Employers who have signed up say they have made savings, improved staff recruitment and retention, seen less absenteeism and increased productivity.

Caterer Lara Omoloja, who runs the Greenwich Pantry in Greenwich, said: "The Greenwich Pantry supports the Living Wage Foundation because the health and wealth of employees and their families depends on the ability to earn a wage that allows them to thrive. Becoming a part of this great work is fundamental to our success as a family oriented Greenwich based business doing our bit to encourage sustainable communities. We are particularly happy that it was a seamless process free from bureaucracy and the rate relief provided by the borough has made it even more worthwhile."

Bureau de change scam warning

AN elderly victim of a foreign exchange scam has lost over 6,300 euros.

Now royal borough trading standards officers are warning residents about the telephone and doorstep scammers purporting to be from high street banks who claim that euros have been fraudulently deposited in people's accounts.

The con involves residents being asked to go to their local bureau de change to purchase thousands of euros from their bank card supposedly because a 'fraudulent transaction' has been made to their account. The victim is then told that a police officer will visit their address to collect the cash. The elderly victim lost money after being convinced that the police and Barclays Bank were assisting her with a case of fraudulent activity on her account.

Cllr Jackie Smith, cabinet member for community safety and environment said: "We are working very closely with local businesses, residents and the police to take action on this specific crime and crack down on scammers more generally operating within the borough."

● If you suspect any suspicious activity, please report it to trading standards on tradingstandards@royalgreenwich.gov.uk or call 020 8921 8223.

Gold-D-locks at a discount

ROYAL Greenwich is offering top-of-the-range bike locks to residents at a discount in partnership with TfL.

The high quality Kryptonite D locks that sell for £80 will be available through the Goldlocks scheme for the heavily discounted price of £29.99 to residents and students living on campus in Greenwich. You must also have had your bike marked with Bike Register, though if your bike has not been marked, you can get it marked for free at a series of events running until June 4.

You can get advice on how to keep your bike secure and receive vouchers to purchase the reduced price locks.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, cabinet member for regeneration and sustainability, said: "We appreciate it can be expensive to buy the best locks and we are delighted to be helping residents buy high-quality locks to help keep their bikes secure. It is very important to lock your bike properly and to use a good lock."

"We are also working with the Met to provide free bike marking."

All vouchers for the bike locks can be redeemed at the Waterfront Leisure Centre and at the Greenwich Centre.

Bird-brained advice for fledglings

BIRD experts are advising local people what to do if they encounter young birds over the summer.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) says it's common in spring and summer to find young birds sitting on the ground or hopping about without any sign of their parents and that these fledglings should be left where they are - in the care of their own parents, which are likely to be nearby.

Workers learning on the job help community project

THE historic St George's Garrison Church in Woolwich got a spruce-up thanks to a partnership between the council and a local voluntary trust.

An 11-strong team made up of local apprentices and participants on the council's Local Labour Programme (GLLP) worked with the Woolwich Garrison Church Trust to clear up debris and rubbish and get the area looking pristine.

Local people can now enjoy the splendid surrounds of the 19th century St George's Garrison Church every Sunday, and a series of open days for the local community are also planned.

The clean-up is the latest in a number of recent projects undertaken by local people benefiting from GLLP. The scheme was set up to help out-of-work residents gain the skills and experience to put them on the road to a permanent job.

Cllr Sizwe James, the council's cabinet member for transport, economy and smart cities, said: "It is really positive that local residents on our GLLP scheme have been able to give St George's Church the once-over and I am sure that visitors will be grateful as it is now back to its best."

"We are committed to helping residents out of poverty and GLLP is about providing support to get them on the first step to employment. The fact that 74 per cent of participants so far have gone on to secure employment is really good news and I am proud of this success."

● St George's Church is open every Sunday 10am - 4pm from June to September, and from 10am-1pm January to May.

New chapter for college books

IT wasn't a closed book situation when a college cleared library shelves for new publications.

The books for courses that are no longer taught at Greenwich Community College have been shipped out to a high school in Ghana.

More than 60 text, reference, story and general knowledge books from the college's Learning Resource Centre are now being used by two secondary schools in Asamankese, Ghana, West Africa.

The books were donated to St Thomas Senior High School, Asamankese and Asamankese Senior High School.

The Rev S M A Mumhiyutun, headmaster at Asamankese Senior High School said: "Staff and students would like to express their profound gratitude to Greenwich Community College, for the donation of books. We do hope this kind gesture is going to strengthen the co-operation between our school and the college, improving the academic fortunes of our students. We assure you that the books will be put to good use."

The link with the Ghana secondary schools came about through college security guard, Yaw Asamoah who comes from the area. Yaw regularly collects and donates computers and books to the local schools and library.

Daniela Anghel, learning resources centre manager said: "The books were withdrawn from the library as the subjects are no longer taught, we are delighted they will continue to be put to good use. The books have been replaced with new text books for taught courses."

● The royal borough has been twinned with the port town of Tema, since 2000. The town is five miles from Ghana's capital

Accra and sits on the Meridian Line. Over the years the two towns have exchanged visits to raise a better understanding and awareness of the different cultures, history and language.

Teaming up to fight racism

PUPILS from Plumcroft primary school watched a special football match with players from the Addicks and leaders of an anti racism campaign group. Charlton Athletic joined campaigners from Show Racism the Red Card (SRtRC) to teach 90 Year 5 pupils about the dangers of racism. The young people toured Charlton's stadium before meeting three 1st team players. © National Maritime Museum, London

The National Maritime Museum has opened a new free gallery to mark the centenary of the Battle of Jutland, the largest sea battle of World War I.

As well as details about the battle on May 31, 1916, which involved 279 ships, the exhibition uncovers the stories of some of those involved and their families at home, as well as the build-up to the battle and its aftermath.

The battle involved ships from the British Grand Fleet and the German High Seas Fleet. Despite huge losses of life and ships – more than 8,500 men were killed – no side emerged victorious.

The exhibition is accompanied by a maritime lecture series, led by historians, curators and experts, every Thursday until June 23 from 11am-12.30pm.

Admission to Jutland 1916: WWI's Greatest Sea Battle is free and is open every day from 10am-5pm. Lectures series talks cost £8.

Ready for Rio

Greenwich
gymnast Ellis flies the flag
for Ireland

TWO of the royal borough's top athletes are winning plaudits as they prepare to compete in this summer's Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro.

Gymnast Ellis O'Reilly became the all-around Irish Senior Champion last week (May 14), whilst talented swimmer Susie Rogers gained the Paralympic qualifying time – securing a place at this year's Brazil games.

Eighteen-year-old Ellis won the Irish championships at Limerick University for the third year in a row.

She also helped her gymnastic team to a big win during the same weekend.

Last month, Ellis made history by becoming the first ever Irish female gymnast to qualify for an Olympic Games after competing in a test event in Rio. Next month she competes in the European competition in Switzerland – her last competition before heading to Rio for the Olympics.

After winning three bronze medals at London 2012 and competing at the top level in World Championships, paralympic swimmer Susie Rogers is hoping to add to her haul in this summer's Olympic Games, which get underway on August 5.

Both athletes are backed by the Greenwich Starting Blocks Trust, a charity launched by the council.

The Trust provides bursaries for young athletes in the royal borough, helping them develop their talents and reach their potential. Its support funds essential costs of training, travel and equipment, plus the costs of competing across the UK and abroad.
